A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF WORKS
BY ALEXANDER HAGGERTY KRAPPE

Edith Smith Krappe
in collaboration with Anne C. Burson

In his 1948 obituary of Krappe, Archer Taylor commented that “folklore has lost its most prolific living scholar.” According to him, Krappe had published “nearly six hundred books, articles, and reviews.” No complete listing existed then, nor has one been published in the thirty-five years since Krappe’s death. Krappe is remembered only for a handful of his many works, and the breadth of his scholarship is not recognized. The publication of this bibliography is intended to rectify the situation. In the course of assembling it, it has become apparent that the figure of “nearly six hundred” citations is spurious. Nonetheless, the over four hundred and thirty references given here remain an impressive oeuvre, especially for a man who worked for so long outside of the mainstream of the American college and university system.
